

Life is unpredictable.

childcare

Parenthood is filled with unknowns: Will your new baby adjust to the daycare center or will she pick up every bug that goes around? Will your nanny stay with you for years or will a series of mishaps have you changing nannies every six months? Will you be able to work on challenging projects or will overtime demands make it impossible?

elder/adult care

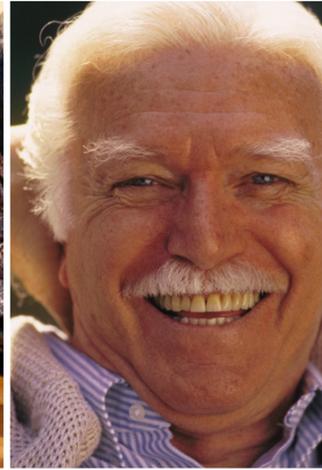

Are you worried about your parents' well being as they age and try to remain independent? Have you already experienced the stress when an unexpected illness or a slip on the ice requires that you, another family member or a professional needs to be present for a week or two? Do you have a plan in place if a spouse/partner needs care after surgery or must undergo months of chemotherapy?

quality care

Parents in a Pinch caregivers are the best. The screening process is extensive, requiring a strong caregiving background and recent and spotless references. Candidates must demonstrate warmth, flexibility and qualify after a background review, including social security verification and criminal background check. Feeling strongly that care for the different ends of the age spectrum takes different talents and personalities, Parents in a Pinch only uses childcare providers for childcare and adult care providers for adult care.
