The Office of the Associate Provost for Digital Learning is happy to announce a limited number of Adobe Creative Suite site licenses available for courses that would employ tools from the suite in their pedagogy and in line with the recent white paper on Digital Literacy. The entire suite includes such industry standard software as Photoshop, Illustrator, Dreamweaver, Audition, Lightroom, Premiere Pro, and each of the Spark apps. Because we are offering these licenses to courses as a trial for what might be much wider distribution in the future—and because we have a limited number of licenses to provide—we are interested in providing access to those courses which offer the greatest promise of immersive and sustained use of the tools in the suite.

Moreover, we are most interested (although not exclusively) in those courses in which the instructor already has some proficiency in using some of the tools found in the Creative Suite. While there will be limited campus support for these tools, it will be best if the instructor is the first line of question/support for the students. (That said, this is NOT a requirement).

To apply for these licenses, please send a letter in which you detail the following:

--Course name, number and section
--Course instructor
--Total number of licenses needed (students and instructor)
--An explanation of how the Creative Suite would be used in the course (if you have assignments from your syllabus that you could share, that would be helpful)
--Some overview of the instructor’s own knowledge of the Adobe Creative Suite.

Applications will be accepted on a rolling basis for both fall 2018 and spring 2019 courses.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact John Sloop at john.m.sloop@vanderbilt.edu or 615-875-9038