ACLS Digital Extension Grants

The ACLS Digital Extension Grant program supports digitally based research projects in all disciplines of the humanities and humanities-related social sciences. It is hoped that these grants will help advance the digital transformation of humanities scholarship by extending the reach of existing digital projects to new communities of users and by adding diversity to the digital record.

This program is made possible by a grant from The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

Please note: affiliations shown are as of time of award. Please click on fellows' names for current information.

2016

Enhancing the Ecclesiastical and Secular Sources for Slave Societies Digital Archive: A Project to Add Content, Improve Technology, and Strengthen Collaborative Networks

Jane Landers
Principal Investigator
History
Vanderbilt University

The Automated Scribal Identification Project

Michael Penn
Principal Investigator
Religion
Mount Holyoke College

Fibra: Toward a Humanistic Analysis of Social Networks

Dan Edelstein
Principal Investigator
French and Italian
Stanford University

The CORONA Atlas Project: Expanding Access to Historic Satellite Imagery on Global Scale

Jesse Casana
Principal Investigator
Anthropology
Dartmouth College

Photogrammar: Seeing and Hearing America's Documentary Record

ACLS fellow John Murphy leading a tour of his exhibition.