Export control laws are U.S. laws that regulate the distribution of strategically important products, services and information to foreign nationals and foreign countries for reasons of foreign policy, economic objectives and national security.